- Honolulu House - Standing in the heart of Marshall's National Historic Landmark District, it is listed on the Historic American Buildings Survey. The house was built in 1860 by the first U.S. consul to the Sandwich Islands. For the next century it served as the residence of four Marshall families, until the Marshall Historical Society was formed in 1961 to purchase it and turn it into a museum. Constructed of Marshall sandstone, the Museum is a wonderful blend of Italianate, Gothic Revival, and Polynesian architecture.

- Governor's Mansion Museum - Currently the home of the Mary Marshall Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, the Governor's Mansion was built in 1839 with the hopes that it would become the governor's home if Marshall were selected as the state capital.

Schuler's Restaurant & Pub (included lunch) - For more than a century, the Schuler family has been welcoming guests to their restaurant in Marshall, Michigan.

- United States Postal Museum - The second largest Postal Service Museum in the U.S., second in size only to the National Postal Museum. The museum is located in the basement of the post office building, which has a Greek Revival architectural style with a copper roof and was built in 1932 of Marshall Sandstone. The museum has a wonderful collection of Postal memorabilia, including 3 mail buggies and 3 vehicles on display.
